Bishop Keane, the deposed rector, is also one of the trustees.

What these twenty-six gentlemen, or as many of them as may choose to come to Washington, will do when they meet on Wednesday week, what names they will select to lay before the Pope, it is, of course, impossible to predict with any pretence of accuracy. The Board of Trustees may not name any one of the dignitaries whose subsequent appointment by the Pope is now asserted as probable. It is, however, asserted with much positiveness, and as emanating indirectly from the new Papal delegate, Archhishop Martinelli, that the Pope's wish is that the new rector of the university should not be a high dignitary of the Church, but one holding no higher ecclesiastical office than that of a secular pricet. It is believed that the potent influence of the Papal legation will be exerted to secure this result, the object being to step outside of all the contraversies between high dignitaries of the Church which are now menacing the progress of the university. actor word which had for its aim or purpose anything short of or less worthy than the best good of the people and the enactment of necessary law to control a most serious menace to the morals of our State.

"You have issued three letters. The first was sent broadcast over the State last March; the second was distributed in our annual Convention during the present week; the third was given simultaneously to the reporters and to our Corresponding Secretary yesterday afternoon. The first of these letters, in its free distribution among the women of our organization through at the State, reached very many who had never heard of the proposed legislation of either bill, some of whom did not personally know either you or our President, and had no knowledge of the matter involved. And the only effect of the letter upon that large constituency was to create doubt and distrust, and so blook the way for the spread of our work.

"The only proper body to deal with this whole matter was our Executive Committee, which held its first meeting since September, 1805, on Monday afternoon of this week, at which time the matter was brought up and discused, and the resolution, to which you have table, exception in one of your letters, was adoited. Representing the Executive Committee we disclaim any justice in your charge that we were a "tibunal" in any wise. We did not condemn any nerves may have been of Christian women who represented great principles. Our leader had been attacked. In view of the endorsement of the work of the State Department of Purity in Literature and Art in our annual Convention at Rochester a year ago, and with a knowledge of all her efforts in this department where the collision with your society occurred, eimple justice demanded that we sustain her, which we did.

"To your two letters received anbsequently we have no reply to make. The record of our

NEW LONG ISLAND PARISH.

St. Killan's, at Farmingdale, in Charge of the Benedictine Pathers. A new Catholic parish has been formed on Long Island by order of Bishop McDonneil and the diocesan consultors. The church will be situated at Farmingdale, a station on the main line of the Long Island Railroad, about thirty miles from Brooklyn, and will be under the direction of the Fathers of the Order of St. Benedict. The Rev. Gerard Spielman, O. S. B., has been apppointed rector, and he has already set been approinted rector, and he has already set to work to find a temperary place of worshin. He is having the Methodisk church at Farming-daie fitted up as a Catholic chapel, and the first mass will be esiebrated there this morning at 10 o'clock.

The property which Father Spielman is anxious to acquire is worth about $3,000. The new church will be named after St. Kilian, the famous Benedictine monk. Father Spielman was attached for several years to the Church of St. Anselm, in 162d street, this city. which we did.

"To your two letters received subsequently we have no reply to make. The record of our organization for the past twenty-two years must be our refuntation of all charges of self-seeking, dishonesty, ignorance, and untruthfulless. "We are an independent organization, and shall maintain our right to protect our officers and State superintentients from further attack from any source. "Very truly yours. WED A CONCERT HALL SINGER

Charles Fiamen Adee, a Young Graduate of Yale, Marries Lillian Green. One of the admirers of Lillian Green, who was one of the accomplices in a roof garden programme last summer, was Charles Flamen Adec, a young graduate of Yale and a member of the Adee family. There were others, and when the foggy-voiced songstress flashed a diamond garter buckle before the eyes of her faith ful coterie one night last summer there was a small riot among them to discover who had been the donor. Others than "Charley," It was admitted, might have been responsible for it and at first he was agreed upon as the lucky man. But the next night a Troop A yellow and blue hatband supplemented the jewelled buckle. "Charley" was not a Troop A man, so there was confusion until "Jack," a possible donor and entitled to the use of the ribbon, was decided upon. But it was "Charley"-Charles Flamen Ades-who had married Miss Green on July 30. only looked conscious when he was accused: "Charley" said nothing. But he went cused; "Charley" said nothing. But he went to live with Misa Green in her mother's boarding house at 207 West Forty-third street, and now the marriage has been openly announced. Mr. Adee said that he and his wife, as well as everyholy else whom it concerned, had known of the affair all along.

Miss Green is youthful, fairly pretty, and has a beautiful figure. Mr. Adee is said to be rich, and is well connected. He denies that his mother has disinherited him on account of his marriage. His wife aang first in the shows of one of the Rice burlesques, later appeared for a few nights at the Garrick Theatre in "Thriby, and sang for a month after her marriage on the floating roof garden that sailed around the bay every night on the Grand Republic.

BLAZE UNDER A REGISTRY BOARD. The Election Officers Had to Give Way for

The Board of Registry of the Forty-fifth election district of the Nineteenth Assembly district meets in a tailor shop kept by O. Swend-sen on the ground floor of 201, West Eightyeighth street. The building is a five story double tenement. The Board has had a cold time of it, and yesterday morning they induced the janitor to build a fire in the furnace in the cellar. About 9:30 o'clock he went down stairs to see how the furnace was working and found the cellar ablaze. He ran out and hunted up a policeman, who tried to summon the firemen a policeman, who tried to summon the firemen from the alarm hox at Eighty-eighth street and the Boulevard. The box was out of order and he had to use another one at Amsterdam avenue and Ninetesth street.

By this time the fire had burned through the store floor and through the air shaft to the second floor, and filled the hallwars with smoke. The firemen found the fire escapes on the avenue-side of the structure filled with women and children, and helped them down to the street. Mrs. Fritz, an invalid, 88 years old, was still helpless in bed on the fourth floor. The men of Truck 22 wrapped her in blankets and carried her through the smoke-filled hallways to the street.

while all this was going on the Board of Registry had registered three men, and they stond at their post until driven out by the fire. They took their books with them, and resumed work in the cold, wet room as hour lates, when the firemen had put out the fire.
